CONTRIBUTORS

- Rebecca M. Albury teaches Sociology and Women's Studies at the University of Wollongong. She has a history of scholarship and activism in reproductive health care issues.
- Douglas Barbour is a well-known Canadian sound poet. He is a Professor in the Department of English at the University of Alberta.
- Barbara Belyea teaches medieval English and literary theory at the University of Calgary. She has edited David Thompson's Columbia Journals (McGill-Queen's, 1994), has published several papers and reviews on cartography, and is currently translating Christian Jacob's L'Empire des cartes for the University of Chicago Press.
- Dennis Drummond is a lecturer in the Department of French at the University of New England.
- Brian Edwards teaches in the Department of English at Deakin University. He is widely published on post-colonial and post-modern issues.
- Marvin Gilman is a Research Assistant in the New Literatures Research Centre at the University of Wollongong.
- Michael Hayes teaches in the Department of English at the University of Wollongong, where he is also researching Australian colonialism in the Pacific.
- Anne Lear lectures in English at the University of Wollongong. Her current research interest centres on the spiritual autobiographies of seventeenth century women writers.
- Greg Ratcliffe is a postgraduate student in the Department of English at the University of Wollongong.
- Simon Ryan has published widely in the area of Australian exploration texts, including a doctoral thesis entitled The Cartographic Eye. His severe critiques of western cartographical practices have not prevented him from becoming easily disorientated.
- Leonie Short is a senior lecturer in Health Management at the University of New England. She has visited Canada several times, most recently to present an international conference paper on the new public health movement.
- Gerry Turcotte is a lecturer in the Department of English at the University of Wollongong. He is co-editor of Australian-Canadian Studies.
- Penny van Toorn is currently an ARC Postdoctoral Fellow in the Department of English at the University of Sydney. She completed her doctorate at the University of British Columbia in 1991, and is the author of Rudy Wiebe and the Historicity of the Word (University of Alberta Press, forthcoming).
- J.A. Wainright is a poet whose latest work is Landscape and Desire: Poems Selected and New (Mosaic Press, 1992). He is a Professor of Canadian Literature and Coordinator of Canadian Studies at Dalhousie University, and has a strong interest in multicultural literature.
